The protest is being organized by the National Farmers Union (NFU), which represents more than 200,000 family farmers and ranchers. The NFU is calling on farmers to plant a row of empty chairs in their fields as a symbol of the empty chairs at their dinner tables.

The protest is scheduled to take place on March 15, 2023. Farmers are being encouraged to plant a row of empty chairs in their fields and post a sign that says, "Empty Chairs at Our Dinner Tables." The protest is intended to raise awareness of the plight of farmers and to demand fair prices for their crops.

Farmers have been struggling for years with low prices for their crops. The average farm income has declined by more than 50% in the past decade.

This decline in income has forced many farmers to give up their farms. In 2022, more than 10,000 farms went out of business.

The low prices for crops are due to a number of factors, including the consolidation of the food industry and the increasing power of large retailers. Farmers are also facing rising costs for land, labor, and equipment.

The NFU is calling on the government to take action to address the unfair prices that farmers are receiving. The NFU is proposing a number of policies, including:

- Breaking up the monopolies that control the food industry
- Requiring large retailers to pay farmers a fair price for their crops
- Investing in research and development to help farmers increase their productivity
- Providing financial assistance to farmers who are struggling to make ends meet

The NFU is also calling on consumers to support farmers by buying food from local farmers and by paying a fair price for their food.

The planting protest is a powerful way for farmers to raise awareness of the plight of farmers and to demand fair prices for their crops. The protest is a reminder that farmers are the backbone of our food system and that they deserve to be treated fairly.

Take Action

There are a number of ways that you can take action to support farmers and the planting protest:

- Contact your elected officials and urge them to support policies that help farmers.
- Buy food from local farmers.
- Pay a fair price for your food.
- Spread the word about the planting protest.

By taking action, you can help farmers get a fair price for their crops and ensure that we have a sustainable food system for the future.
